INTRODUCTION

2 1. Plaintiffs the States of California, Connecticut, Oregon and its Governor Kate 3 Brown, Massachusetts, and Washington (collectively, “the States”), bring this action to protect 4 the integrity of their Medicaid home and community-based services programs against Defendants 5 the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and Secretary Alex M. Azar, II 6 (collectively, Defendants), who have unlawfully attempted to reinterpret the Medicaid Act in 7 service of anti-union objectives that bear no relationship to the purpose of that Act. In doing so, 8 Defendants seek to upend careful arrangements created by States to allow older adults and 9 individuals with disabilities to maximize their autonomy and independence by directing their own 10 care, with support from state and local governments relating to the financial logistics of paying 11 care providers.

12 2. Each of the States has chosen to include consumer-directed home and community-13 based personal care services (referred to hereafter generally as “homecare”) as an element of their 14 Medicaid programs, in order to provide assistance that eligible individuals who are aged, blind 15 and have disabilities need to live safely in their own homes and communities, and avoid 16 unnecessary institutionalization. The type of assistance depends on each states’ unique program 17 design and individuals’ needs, but generally includes services like paramedical services, 18 accompaniment to medical appointments, bowel and bladder care, bathing, meal preparation, 19 housecleaning, laundry, grocery shopping, and protective supervision.

20 3. Consumer direction allows eligible Medicaid beneficiaries to hire, fire, and 21 supervise their own care providers. State or local government entities are generally responsible 22 (with state-to-state variations) for assisting beneficiaries by setting wages and benefits for 23 providers and authorizing payments for hours of service and/or types of services. Collectively, 24 the States’ Medicaid programs serve more than 700,000 individuals in need of in-home assistance 25 through consumer-directed programs.

26 4. Each of the States has sought to improve the quality and stability of Medicaid 27 homecare by extending state laws that authorize public-sector bargaining to the homecare 28 workforce and permitting voluntary payroll deductions and/or benefit contributions. Historically,

1 homecare workers have engaged in difficult, often physically-demanding work and faced low 2 wages, few benefits, frequent injuries, and unpredictable hours, with no means to collectively 3 address working conditions. Since States' authorization of collective bargaining, homecare 4 workers have collectively chosen union representation. Federal and state laws authorize the 5 direct deduction of voluntary union dues and other benefits customary for employees, such as 6 health insurance premiums or retirement contributions, from providers' paychecks, or 7 contributions to benefit trusts on behalf of providers.

8 5. On May 6, 2019, HHS issued a Final Rule that purports to reinterpret the Medicaid 9 Act in a manner that would prohibit States from directly withholding these ordinary, voluntary 10 deductions from homecare workers' paychecks. In doing so, the Rule abruptly and without any 11 sound rationale or conversations with affected states rescinded a federal Medicaid regulation 12 confirming the established practice of direct deductions. Defendants' purported basis for this rule 13 change is a 47-year-old provision of the federal Medicaid Act, 42 U.S.C. Section 1396a(a)(32)
14 (hereinafter Section (a)(32)), that prohibits assignment of rights to collect payment for Medicaid 15 services to third parties. Congress enacted that provision to prohibit a fraudulent medical-16 financing scheme that bears no relationship whatsoever to legal payroll deductions such as union 17 dues or other worker benefits. Neither the language of the statute, legislative history, long-18 standing judicial construction of Section (a)(32), nor Defendants' own recent rulemaking supports 19 this new interpretation of the law. Indeed, Congress had not even contemplated the Medicaid 20 authorities primarily used by the States today to provide consumer-directed homecare services.
21 The regulation the Secretary seeks to eliminate was not necessary to establish the lawfulness of 22 payroll deductions to pay for items such as union membership dues or health benefits, because the 23 anti-reassignment statute did not prohibit them even without the regulation. The Final Rule 24 announces CMS's intent to enforce its reading of the Medicaid Act and to require States to cease 25 authorizing payroll deductions, under circumstances set forth in the rule, for union dues and other 26 workplace benefits.

27 6. If implemented in accordance with the Secretary's reinterpretation of the Medicaid 28 Act, the Final Rule would undermine laws and agreements that have improved the provision of homecare to the States' residents. It would disrupt well-established collective bargaining relationships and weaken an organized workforce infrastructure that the States have authorized as a result of provider self-organization and in order to channel labor relations in a productive and cooperative manner that contributes to the building, training, and mobilization of Medicaid home-care workforces. While the States could, in theory, avoid risking this disruption by foregoing federal Medicaid funding for personal care services, doing so would forfeit more than $6.5 billion in federal dollars, causing devastating harm to state healthcare budgets and eroding the States' capacity to provide needed homecare for seniors and persons with disabilities. Defendants' Final Rule adds a condition to Medicaid funding that is not authorized by statute and is intended to improperly force the States to choose between including these services in their Medicaid programs and upholding state laws and contractual obligations that promote a more stable, effective, and skilled homecare workforce.

7. The States seek injunctive and declaratory relief on the grounds that the manner and substance of Defendants' new policy guidance violates the Administrative Procedure Act (APA).

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

8. This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331 (actions arising under the laws of the United States) and 5 U.S.C. §§ 701-706 (APA). An actual controversy exists between the parties within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 2201(a), and this Court may grant declaratory relief, injunctive relief, and other relief pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201-2202 and 5 U.S.C. §§ 705-706.

9. Defendants' issuance of the new rule on May 6, 2019, constitutes a final agency action and is therefore judicially reviewable within the meaning of the APA. 5 U.S.C. §§ 704, 706.

10. Venue is proper in this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(e) because this is a judicial district in which Plaintiff the State of California resides and this action seeks relief against federal agencies and officials acting in their official capacities.

INTRADISTRICT ASSIGNMENT

11. Pursuant to Civil Local Rules 3-5(b) and 3-2(c), there is no basis for assignment of this action to any particular location or division of this Court.

PARTIES

12. Plaintiff, the State of California, by and through its Attorney General Xavier Becerra, brings this action. As California's Chief Law Officer, the Attorney General has the authority to file civil actions in order to protect public rights and interests and promote the health and welfare of Californians. Cal. Const., art. V, § 13. This challenge is brought pursuant to the Attorney General's independent constitutional, statutory, and common law authority to represent the public interest. See Pierce v. Super. Ct., 1 Cal.2d 759, 761-62 (1934) (holding that the Attorney General "has the power to file any civil action or proceeding directly involving the rights and interest of the state [...] and the protection of public rights and interests").

13. Plaintiffs, the State of Oregon and its Governor Kate Brown, are represented by the Attorney General of Oregon, Ellen Rosenblum. Attorney General Rosenblum is the chief law officer of Oregon and is empowered to bring this action on behalf of the State of Oregon and its affected agencies under Oregon Revised Statutes §§ 180.060, 180.210, and 180.220.

14. Plaintiff, the State of Washington is represented by its Attorney General, who is the State's chief legal adviser. The powers and duties of the Attorney General include acting in federal court on matters of public concern to the State.

15. Plaintiff, the State of Connecticut, is represented by the Attorney General of Connecticut, William Tong. Attorney General Tong is the chief legal officer of the State of Connecticut and has the authority to file civil actions to protect Connecticut's rights and interests. Conn. Const., art. IV, § 4; Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 3-124, et seq. Attorney General Tong is authorized to bring this action on behalf of the State of Connecticut and its agencies under Conn. Gen. Stat. § 3-125.

16. Plaintiff, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is represented by Attorney General Maura Healey, as its chief law officer, who is granted traditional common law duties to represent

1 the Commonwealth and broad statutory authority to act in the public interest. Mass. Gen. Laws.
2 c. 12, § 3; Feeney v. Commonwealth, 373 Mass. 359, 366, 366 N.E.2d 1262, 1266 (1977).

3 17. The States have an interest in ensuring the stability and quality of their Medicaid 4 home and community-based service programs. Protection of health and welfare is one of the 5 traditional police powers of the States. The States rely on Defendants' compliance with the 6 procedural and substantive requirements of the APA in order to obtain timely and accurate 7 information about activities that may have significant adverse impacts on their administration of 8 their Medicaid programs, and to participate meaningfully in an impartial and public decision-9 making process that is consistent with the Medicaid Act's purpose of furnishing medical 10 assistance and rehabilitative services to those in need.

11 18. Each State is aggrieved by the actions of Defendants and has standing to bring this 12 action because of the injury to its state sovereignty caused by Defendants' issuance of the illegal 13 rule, including immediate and irreparable injuries to its sovereign, quasi-sovereign, and 14 proprietary contract interests. In particular, the States will suffer concrete and substantial harm 15 because the Final Rule frustrates the States' public health interests by attempting to disrupt the 16 collective-bargaining process that the States have established with respect to independent 17 Medicaid homecare providers. If CMS enforces the new interpretation set forth in the Final Rule, 18 it will undermine state laws and contracts that further these interests.

19 19. Defendant Alex M. Azar II is Secretary of HHS and is sued in his official capacity.
20 Secretary Azar has responsibility for implementing and fulfilling HHS's duties under the 21 Constitution, the Medicaid Act, and the APA.

22 20. Defendant HHS is an agency of the United States government and bears 23 responsibility, in whole or in part, for the acts complained of in this Complaint. The Centers for 24 Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) is an entity within HHS.

STATUTORY BACKGROUND

I. THE MEDICAID ACT

A. Medicaid Generally

21. Title XIX of the Social Security Act establishes Medicaid as a joint federal-state medical assistance program. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 1396 to 1396w-5. All states participate in Medicaid, and the states’ participation is critical to their ability to provide for the health and welfare of their residents. All participating states must submit a state Medicaid plan describing their programs and affirming compliance with the requirements of the Medicaid Act and its implementing regulations. 42 U.S.C. § 1396a.

22. Medicaid was enacted for the purpose of “enabling each State, as far as practicable under the conditions in such State, to furnish (1) medical assistance on behalf of families with dependent children and of aged, blind, or disabled individuals, whose income and resources are insufficient to meet the costs of necessary medical services, and (2) rehabilitation and other services to help such families and individuals attain or retain capability for independence or self-care.” 42 U.S.C. § 1396-1.

23. The Medicaid Act requires the Secretary to “provide such safeguards as may be necessary to assure that [...] care and services will be provided, in a manner consistent with [...] the best interests of the recipients.” 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(19). Apart from federal safeguards and subject to specific state waiver agreements, however, states have a great deal of discretion in administering their individual Medicaid programs according to state interests and priorities.

24. Consumer-directed personal care services that provide in-home assistance with activities of daily living for eligible residents are optional services that States may choose to cover within their Medicaid programs. Each of the plaintiff States has elected to offer such services in its Medicaid plan. These services may be covered under a number of different federal Medicaid authorities, including state plan options, one or more waivers approved by CMS, or both. See, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 1396d(a)(24) (state plan option); 42 U.S.C. §§ 1396n(c) (waiver authority for home and community-based services), 1396n(i) (state plan home and community-based services), 1396n(j) (self-directed personal care services), and 1396n(k) (Community First Choice state plan option). The States also provide federally mandated personal care services when they are medically necessary for children eligible for early and periodic screening, diagnostic, and treatment (EPSDT) services.

25. Many states provide Medicaid homecare services through private agencies that employ homecare workers. Some states, including Plaintiffs, also use consumer direction, sometimes also referred to as the “individual provider model” or “individual provider mode,” whereby eligible Medicaid beneficiaries hire, fire, and supervise their own homecare providers, but the state finances the services through Medicaid, and state or local government entities set wages and benefits for providers and authorize hours of service and types of services.

26. State and federal governments share responsibility for funding Medicaid. Federal dollars provide at least fifty percent of the funding for the States’ Medicaid personal care services benefits.

B. The Medicaid Act’s Anti-Reassignment Provision

27. The portion of the Medicaid Act at issue in this case provides, in relevant part, that “no payment ... for any care or service provided to an individual shall be made to anyone other than such individual or the person or institution providing such care or service, under an assignment or power of attorney or otherwise [...]” 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(32).

28. Originally enacted in 1972, Section (a)(32) was intended to address problems associated with “factoring” in the Medicaid system, a practice where healthcare providers sold Medicaid receivables at a discount to third parties, who in turn submitted the assigned claims to the government in their own names. See H.R. Rep. 92-231 (1971), as reprinted in 1972 U.S.C.C.A.N. 4989, 5090. According to the 1971 United States House of Representatives Report, “[s]uch reassignments have been a source of incorrect and inflated claims for service and have created administrative problems with respect to determinations of reasonable charges and recovery of overpayments.” Id. Section (a)(32) was adopted to prevent such abuses of the Medicaid system.

29. The anti-reassignment provision was amended in 1977, to add language expanding the prohibition on assignment of Medicaid claims to include payment made under “power of 1 attorney or otherwise,” and to add exceptions to the prohibition. P.L. 95-142, 91 Stat. 1175

2 (1977). Congress intended “to preclude the use of a power of attorney as a device to circumvent 3 the existing ban on the use of ‘factoring’ arrangements in connection with the payment of 4 claims.” H.R. Rep. No. 95-393, 95th Cong., 1st Sess., 48 (1977), as reprinted in 1977
5 U.S.C.C.A.N. 3039, 3051. The legislative history notes Congress’ concern that “[a]lthough 6 factoring was outlawed under the Social Security Amendments of 1972, factoring firms have 7 evaded statutory intent by working under a power of attorney arrangement.” Id. at 3048. The 8 amendment thus “clarifie[d] existing law to insure that a power of attorney cannot be used to 9 circumvent the prohibition in existing law against the use of ‘factoring’ arrangements in 10 connection with the payment of provider claims by the medicare and medicaid [sic] programs.” 11 Id. at 3045.

12 30. The anti-reassignment statute sets forth a number of exceptions. For example, 13 Medicaid providers may assign payments to a governmental agency and may appoint an agent for 14 billing purposes, provided that the agent is not paid based on the amount of Medicaid payments 15 recovered. 42 U.S.C. § 1396a(a)(32)(B).

16 31. Nowhere does the anti-reassignment statute speak to ordinary payroll deductions 17 and contributions for items like voluntary health insurance or union dues that are not in 18 themselves claims to a “payment for any care or service provided to an individual” Medicaid 19 beneficiary.

20 32. Section (a)(32) has never been construed to apply to practices that do not implicate 21 Congress’ concerns regarding fraud and abuse. Despite long-standing state laws and practices 22 authorizing direct payroll deductions and contributions for voluntary worker benefits and union 23 dues, until issuance of the May 6, 2019 Rule, neither Congress nor HHS had ever taken any 24 action to prohibit routine, authorized deductions from the paychecks of Medicaid providers.
25
26
27
28

II. ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE ACT

33. Pursuant to the APA, a reviewing court shall hold unlawful and set aside agency action, findings, and conclusions found to be “(A) arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law; (B) contrary to constitutional right, power, privilege, or immunity; (C) in excess of statutory jurisdiction, authority, or limitations, or short of statutory right.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2).

34. The APA defines “agency action” to include “the whole or a part of an agency rule, order, license, sanction, relief, or the equivalent or denial thereof, or failure to act.” Id. § 551(13) (emphasis added); see id. § 551(4) (defining “rule” to mean “the whole or a part of an agency statement of general or particular applicability and future effect designed to implement, interpret, or prescribe law or policy”).

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

I. BACKGROUND ON MEDICAID HOMECARE

35. Homecare is difficult and often physically demanding work. Homecare workers, most of whom are women, have historically faced low wages, few benefits, frequent injuries, and unpredictable hours, with no means to collectively address such challenges in their interactions with their individual clients. In part for these reasons, the homecare workforce has typically had a high rate of turnover, which has a negative impact on Medicaid homecare beneficiaries and makes it more difficult to develop a well-trained workforce.

36. Collective bargaining is one of the tools that States have chosen to employ in order to improve the quality and stability of the Medicaid homecare workforce. Workers represented by unions generally enjoy higher wages, benefits, and access to training.

37. Only homecare providers who elect to join the union pay dues to the union. Medicaid home-care providers are not required to pay “fair share” or “agency” fees to cover the costs of collective bargaining if they decline to join the union. Harris v. Quinn, 573 U.S. 616 (2014). In all of the States, therefore, direct deductions of union dues are authorized by workers’ voluntary agreement. These agreements do not “assign” any payment or rights to payment to the

1 union or any other entity. Union dues are a voluntary payroll deduction, just like common 2 voluntary payroll deductions for health, dental, and vision insurance.

3 38. Workers who provide consumer-directed Medicaid homecare are employed by the 4 individual person with a disability in need of these services. This allows Medicaid consumers (or 5 their guardians) to direct their own care through the hiring, firing, and day-to-day supervision of 6 homecare providers.

7 39. Meanwhile, either the States or local authorities assume responsibilities for general 8 conditions related to Medicaid homecare providers' employment. Each of the States has 9 permitted collective bargaining as a key component of these responsibilities. The States or local 10 authorities negotiate with unions with respect to issues such as determining training requirements, 11 referral programs, and optimizing wage and benefit packages to allow the States and local 12 authorities to recruit and better retain a talented pool of homecare workers.

13 40. Paragraphs 42 to 80 below demonstrate some of the ways that the States have used 14 the collective bargaining process to build, train and stabilize their homecare workforces by 15 cooperatively addressing working conditions identified as particularly important to homecare 16 workers within each state. This process relies in part on cooperation between state or local 17 agencies and professionally staffed workforce representatives to address overarching issues and 18 find innovative solutions to the problems faced by workers who are often dispersed and isolated.

19 41. As homecare providers have formed unions and advocated for themselves and 20 their profession, this has had positive effects for both Medicaid beneficiaries and workers. For 21 example, in some instances unionized homecare workers are more likely to have health insurance 22 than those without representation. Unions also help reduce worker turnover, a critical factor in 23 providing high quality care.

24 A. California's Medicaid In-Home Supportive Services Program

25 42. California's Medicaid consumer-directed personal care services program, known 26 as In-Home Supportive Services (IHSS), provides in-home assistance to eligible individuals who 27 are aged, blind and disabled as an alternative to out-of-home care, in order to enable those 28 persons to "safely remain in their homes or abodes of their own choosing." Cal. Welf. & Inst.

1 Code § 12300(a). The IHSS program provides in-home assistance with certain basic tasks of 2 daily living, such as bathing, dressing, meal preparation and clean up, eating, bowel and bladder 3 care, and taking necessary medications. Cal. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 12300(b) & (c); 4 14132.95(d)(1), (2); 14132.951(c). California has chosen to make a substantial investment in 5 these services in part to allow recipients to avoid unnecessary and costly institutionalization, and 6 to protect the rights of Californians with disabilities under the Americans with Disabilities Act 7 and the Supreme Court's decision in Olmstead v. L.C., 527 U.S. 581 (1999).

8 43. California's Medicaid personal care services program is the nation's largest, 9 serving more than 594,000 Californians statewide, with over 500,000 workers providing care.

10 44. California was the first state in the nation to seek to improve the quality and 11 stability of the IHSS provider workforce by extending its public sector bargaining laws to include 12 these workers. In the early 1990s, the California Legislature authorized and funded the 13 establishment of county-level public authorities that were able to negotiate contracts with the 14 workers' democratically-designated union representatives and coordinate the delivery of IHSS 15 services across the state. 1992 Cal. Stat. Ch. 722, § 54; 1993 Cal. Stat. Ch. 69, § 55. Building on 16 the success of this change, the Legislature later required all counties that had not yet done so to 17 establish public authorities or adopt one of a number of specified alternative methods for 18 managing the homecare workforce. 1999 Cal. Stat. Ch. 90, § 4; Cal. Welf. & Inst. Code 19 § 12302.25.

20 45. Homecare workers across California's counties have joined unions and voted in 21 favor of union representation. These Medicaid providers are primarily represented by two unions, 22 SEIU Local 2015 and AFSCME United Domestic Workers. Statewide, more than half of 23 California's IHSS workers elect to join the union and to pay their union dues through payroll 24 deduction.

25 46. Although the content of collective-bargaining agreements in California varies by 26 county, all provide wages and benefits that exceed those available to IHSS workers prior to the 27 introduction of collective bargaining.
28

1 47. Some union-negotiated contracts provide benefits such as additional free training 2 for workers on first aid; stipends for trainings arranged by the county public authority; and 3 reimbursements for training materials. Some contracts provide for free, job-related supplies, such 4 as gloves, masks, slide boards, or gait belts for ambulation and transfer.

5 48. Collective-bargaining agreements in thirty California counties (including the most 6 populous counties where a majority of IHSS providers reside) provide health, dental and vision 7 benefits for homecare workers. IHSS providers who elect to receive such benefits in some cases 8 can pay their employee contributions for the benefits through payroll deduction. As of June 2017, 9 almost 88,000 active IHSS workers had elected a deduction for health care benefits pursuant to a 10 collective bargaining agreement.

11 49. Collective-bargaining agreements in California often contain provisions 12 establishing statutorily required referral registries, i.e. databases of available homecare providers, 13 and setting guidelines for how referrals will be made.

14 50. IHSS workforce representatives frequently participate on behalf of their members 15 in stakeholder bodies or other policy fora that address access, service delivery, and quality of care 16 issues within the IHSS program. For example, IHSS provider representatives have played a role 17 in refining the IHSS provider orientation curriculum; implementing new regulations under the 18 Fair Labor Standards Act; and developing California's uniform statewide protocols for program 19 integrity activities.

20 51. Paychecks for IHSS providers are issued by the State of California. State law 21 requires that the State of California Controller "shall make any deductions from the wages of in-22 home supportive services personnel ... that are agreed to by that public authority in collective 23 bargaining with the designated representative of the in-home supportive services personnel ...
24 and transfer the deducted funds as directed in that agreement." Cal. Gov't Code § 12301.6(i)(2).
25 Pursuant to this statutory authority, the Controller deducts agreed-upon costs from IHSS 26 providers' paychecks.

27 52. These payroll deductions include union dues for all providers who voluntarily join 28 the union, and, in some counties, payments for health insurance, dental and vision insurance, and

1 retirement plans for providers who elect those benefits. Such deductions have been made from at 2 least some California providers' paychecks since at least the 1990s.

3 53. Although the vast majority of California's IHSS providers are employed via the 4 Individual Provider or consumer-directed mode, a very small number of IHSS providers (about 5 1,000) are employed only by privately-run agencies. In those cases, the agency is paid through 6 Medicaid and it is the agency that issues paychecks and deducts any costs for voluntary union 7 dues or other employee benefits.

8 B. State of Oregon's Medicaid Homecare Program

9 54. Oregon is a joint employer of its direct homecare workforce paid with Medicaid 10 funds. The State of Oregon, along with the individual Medicaid clients, jointly employ 11 approximately 30,000 direct homecare workers providing services to over 20,000 Medicaid 12 recipients each month. Homecare workers provide in-home assistance to individuals with 13 disabilities and older Oregonians. They assist with basic tasks of daily living, such as bathing, 14 dressing, meal preparation and clean up, eating, bowel and bladder care, and assistance with 15 taking medications.

16 55. In 2000, Oregon voters amended the Oregon Constitution to create the Oregon 17 Home Care Commission and to give homecare workers "the right to form, join and participate in 18 labor organizations for collective bargaining" with the State. Or. Const. art. XV, § 11(3)(f).
19 Acting on that authority, in 2001, a majority of Oregon homecare workers elected Services 20 Employees International Union Local 503 as their exclusive bargaining representative. Since 21 then, the union and State have negotiated collective-bargaining agreements, improving benefits 22 and increasing salaries for all homecare workers. Statewide, the majority of Oregon's homecare 23 workers have elected to join the union and to pay their union dues through payroll deductions.

24 56. As homecare providers have formed unions and advocated for themselves and 25 their profession, Oregon has experienced a higher quality and more stable homecare workforce.
26 Tremendous federal and state Medicaid cost-savings result from the expansion of these services.
27 Additionally, turnover has decreased significantly since homecare workers formed unions. All of 28

1 this has promoted greater quality of care and patient safety, to the benefit of Oregon's Medicaid 2 program.

3 57. The collective-bargaining agreement provides wages and benefits that exceed 4 those which were available to homecare workers prior to the introduction of collective 5 bargaining. Benefits available to homecare workers in Oregon include health, vision, and dental 6 insurance, paid time off through the Oregon Homecare Workers Benefit Trust and the Oregon
7 Homecare Workers Supplement Trust, as well as training, supplies, career development 8 opportunities, and an on-line registry that matches individuals needing in-home services with 9 homecare workers qualified to provide routine, emergency and respite care. The Oregon 10 Homecare Workers Benefit Trust and the Oregon Homecare Workers Supplement Trust provide 11 benefits to eligible homecare and personal-support workers covered by the SEIU Local 503 12 bargaining unit. The Benefit Trust provides dental, vision, and employee assistance program 13 benefits and PTO benefits to eligible participants. The Supplemental Trust provides assistance 14 with paying for certain medical premium and out-of-pocket expenses relating to claims covered 15 under the participant's Trust-Approved Qualified Health Plan or Medicare Plan.

16 58. Paychecks to homecare providers are issued by the State of Oregon. State law 17 requires the state to deduct from the salary or wages of homecare providers the amount of money 18 authorized for payment to the designated labor organization. See Or. Rev. Stat. § 292.055.
19 Pursuant to this statutory authority, the Oregon Department of Human Services deducts agreed-20 upon costs from homecare providers' paychecks, including voluntary union dues and other 21 authorized deductions. Deductions for union dues have been made from Oregon homecare 22 providers' paychecks for close to two decades.

23 C. State of Washington's Medicaid Personal Care Services Program

24 59. Washington's Medicaid personal care services program, which began as a 1915(c) 25 waiver in 1983 and expanded as a state plan entitlement in 1989, provides in-home assistance as 26 an alternative to institutionalization to eligible individuals who are functionally disabled. The 27 program provides in-home assistance with activities of daily living, such as bathing, dressing, 28 meal preparation and clean up, eating, incontinence care, and taking necessary medications. In

1 1993, the Washington legislature directed the Department of Social and Health Services to 2 expand home and community based long-term care options to provide additional opportunities for 3 beneficiaries to receive care in settings other than nursing homes. Wash. Rev. Code 4 §§ 74.39A.007, .030. One of the options Washington developed was to build on the existing 5 state-funded and Medicaid state plan and waiver programs, which support consumers who chose 6 to self-direct the provision of in-home personal care provided by individual providers.

7 60. Washington has made a substantial investment in this program and has been 8 successful in reducing the proportion of individuals served in nursing homes. In 1992, there were 9 36,649 individuals receiving long-term care — 47% received care in nursing homes and 53%
10 received care in the community. In 2017, there were 65,336 people receiving long-term care — 11 only 15% received care in a nursing home and 85% received care in their homes or another 12 community setting. In part because of Washington's success in providing long-term care in 13 community-based settings, the AARP ranked Washington's long-term care system first in the 14 nation in its 2017 report. In its previous two reports, issued in 2011 and 2014, the AARP ranked 15 Washington second.

16 61. A large part of this success has been the ability to invest in individual provider 17 wages, benefits, and the attainment of new skills to meet the changing needs of the beneficiaries 18 served in their own homes. Washington has partnered with the federal government on funding 19 these critical investments to ensure an accessible and available workforce since 1995 when the 20 state began paying for health insurance and training for in-home workers.

21 62. At any given point in time, about 37,000 Medicaid beneficiaries in Washington 22 have chosen to receive personal care in their homes from a workforce of around 45,000 providers.
23 The average monthly in-home personal care benefit is 101 hours. Altogether, it adds up to around 24 50,000,000 hours of in-home personal care services provided by individual providers per year.
25 Washington will expend about two billion dollars for federal fiscal year 2018 to provide long-26 term care services to some of its most vulnerable citizens. Of that total, about one billion dollars 27 is for the services of individual providers, of which the federal financial participation amounts to 28 almost $618,000,000.

1 63. In 2001, the people of Washington passed Initiative 775, which granted collective-2 bargaining rights to individual providers. Wash. Rev. Code § 74.39A.270. Individual providers 3 are public employees for the purposes of collective bargaining. Id. In August 2002, 84% of the 4 individual provider bargaining unit members who participated in the election voted for union 5 representation with a bargaining unit of 25,500 homecare workers at the time. These 6 Medicaid providers are represented by SEIU 775. Of the group of individual providers paid 7 between August 2018 and January 30, 2019, 78% (over 40,000) have chosen to join the 8 union and have dues deducted from their payments.

9 64. In 2011, the people of Washington passed Initiative 1163, which requires 10 additional training and certification requirements for individual providers. Washington has 11 worked closely with its state and federal partners, including the union, to develop and retain a 12 well-trained long-term care workforce. The union has played a significant role in achieving this 13 goal by successfully advocating and collectively bargaining for individual providers to have 14 access to healthcare, training, and retirement benefits. The compensation and benefits package 15 for individual providers also helps beneficiaries who receive personal care services by supporting 16 a well-trained workforce and attracting new providers to the workforce.

17 65. Washington negotiated and implemented training and healthcare benefits for 18 individual providers in 2009 and added retirement benefits in 2015. Pursuant to its collective 19 bargaining agreement with SEIU 775, Washington contributes to trusts to provide these benefits 20 to the individual providers, and its trust contributions are included as part of the individual 21 provider Medicaid rate approved by CMS. Washington has operated these programs with CMS 22 approval and reimbursement since implementation in 2009, including the approximately five-year 23 period prior to the promulgation of 42 CFR §447.10(g)(4). As CMS has continually allowed the 24 state's payment methodology for individual providers over the past decade, Washington has made 25 significant investments in the individual provider benefits package and the infrastructure 26 necessary to operate the individual provider system.

27 66. If Washington is prohibited from making these contributions, it could have a 28 devastating impact on the state's ability to recruit and retain a well-trained individual provider workforce. This could cause some of the state's most vulnerable citizens to lose access to critical in-home services, leaving them at risk or forcing them into institutional settings which will increase costs to both the state and federal government.

67. Individual providers submit their hours to the state and receive payment twice a month. Washington deducts federal taxes. Pursuant to state law and the collective bargaining agreement, Washington also deducts voluntary union dues and a $25 per month healthcare benefit premium when authorized by the individual provider, and other voluntary deductions as authorized by the provider. In February 2019, 13,964 individual providers opted to have health benefits premium deducted from their payments. As noted earlier, a substantial majority of individual providers have also voluntarily elected to have union dues deducted from their payments.

D. State of Connecticut's Medicaid Personal Care Services Program

68. Connecticut's Medicaid personal care services program provides in-home assistance to the elderly and disabled. The program provides in-home assistance with homemaker services, companion services, meals on wheels, adult day care, transportation, mental health counseling, care management, occupational therapy, elderly foster care, minor home modifications, and assisted living services provided in state-funded congregate housing and in other assisted living pilot or demonstration projects established under state law. Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 17b-342, 17b-370, 17b-605a.

69. Connecticut's Medicaid personal care services program has approximately 4,300 direct homecare workers providing services to about 15,000 Medicaid recipients each month.

70. In 2012, Connecticut enacted legislation creating the Personal Care Attendants Workforce Council and giving home personal care attendants the right to form labor organizations for collective bargaining with the State. Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 17b-706a, 17b-706b. Connecticut personal care attendants chose New England Healthcare Employees Union, Local 1199, Service Employees International Union as their exclusive bargaining representative, and collective-bargaining agreements increasing wages and benefits for all personal care attendants

1 have been negotiated. Statewide, the majority of Connecticut’s home personal care attendants 2 have elected to join the union and pay their union dues through payroll deductions.

3 71. The current collective bargaining agreement provides wages and benefits 4 exceeding those available to personal care attendants prior to the introduction of collective 5 bargaining. Benefits include workers’ compensation, overtime pay for holidays and a training 6 fund.

7 72. Connecticut law specifically provides for deductions of union dues from the wages 8 of personal care attendants pursuant to collective bargaining agreements, by a fiscal intermediary 9 of the State. Conn. Gen. Stat. § 17b-706b(b)(3).

10 E. Massachusetts’ Consumer-Directed Personal Care Attendant Program

11 73. Massachusetts has elected to make self-directed personal care attendant services 12 available to its MassHealth members through the Massachusetts Personal Care Attendant 13 program. 130 Mass. Code Regs. §§ 422.00 et seq. Under this program, the MassHealth member– 14 or consumer–is the statutory “employer” of the Personal Care Attendant (“PCA”), and is fully 15 responsible for recruiting, hiring, scheduling, training, time-keeping, and terminating PCAs. 130 16 Mass. Code Regs. § 422.420.

17 74. PCAs in Massachusetts provide a range of services to over 40,000 consumers 18 living at home. These critical services are medically necessary and may include help with 19 bathing and grooming, dressing, exercises, eating, and toileting. Section 422.410(A). PCAs also 20 assist consumers with daily household tasks, such as laundry, shopping, cooking, and 21 housekeeping, and they may accompany consumers to medical appointments. Section 22 422.410(B). MassHealth consumers rely on these personal care services in order to continue to 23 live safely and with dignity in their own homes. There are currently over 40,820 MassHealth 24 members receiving such PCA services.

25 75. Since 2006, Massachusetts PCAs are deemed “public employees” for collective 26 bargaining purposes under General Laws of Massachusetts chapter 150E and for purposes of 27 employee-authorized payroll deductions. See Mass. Gen. Laws. ch. 118E, § 73(b) (added by St.
 28 2012, ch. 224, § 131, formerly St. 2006, ch. 268). At the same time, the Massachusetts Personal

1 Care Attendant Quality Home Care Workforce Council (“the Council”) was established within 2 the Executive Office of Health and Human Services, General Laws of Massachusetts ch. 118E, 3 §§ 71-75 (added by St. 2012, ch. 224, § 131, formerly St. 2006, ch. 268) “to ensure the quality of 4 long-term, in home, personal care by recruiting, training and stabilizing the work force of 5 personal care attendants.” Mass. Gen. Laws. ch. 118E, § 71(a). Among other things, the Council 6 acts on behalf of MassHealth consumers, as the employers’ representative, to collectively bargain 7 with Massachusetts PCAs.

8 76. In 2007, PCAs in Massachusetts voted to elect 1199 SEIU United Healthcare 9 Workers East to be their exclusive bargaining representative. Their Agreement requires that 10 union dues be deducted from wages, when PCAs choose to join the union and authorize such 11 deductions. Such voluntary deductions for union dues have been in place since 2008.

12 77. Consumers are assisted by fiscal intermediaries, who perform certain employer 13 required tasks for the Consumers. 130 Mass. Code Regs. § 422.419. MassHealth pays fiscal 14 intermediaries for these services. Id. § 422.411(C).

15 78. The fiscal intermediary is responsible for “issuing checks to PCAs equal to the 16 PCA wage component of the PCA rate, with appropriate taxes withheld and other applicable 17 required withholdings,” Section 422.419(B)(12), and for “paying unemployment insurance taxes, 18 purchasing worker’s compensation insurance, and preparing the PCA payroll,” Section 422.402 19 (Employer-required Tasks).

20 79. Workers’ compensation coverage for Massachusetts PCAs is obtained through 21 policies issued by private insurers in the name of each consumer as the employer.

22 80. Every employer in Massachusetts must purchase and maintain workers’ 23 compensation insurance coverage to promote the health, safety and welfare of workers who are 24 injured regardless of fault. Mass. Gen. Laws. ch. 152, §§ 25A and 25C. Those who fail to 25 maintain such coverage as required are subject to the imposition of stop work orders and criminal 26 enforcement action. Mass. Gen. Laws. ch. 152, § 25C(1)-(2) and (5). Workers’ compensation 27 insurance coverage provides a vitally important social safety net, created in response to strong public sentiment that the remedies afforded at common law were inadequate to protect workers. CNA Ins. Cos. v. Sliski, 433 Mass. 491, 493, 744 N.E. 2d 634, 636 (2001).
28

F. Federal Regulations

81. In 2014, CMS issued added an additional subsection to regulations implementing Section (a)(32) that provided that “[i]n the class of practitioners for which the Medicaid program is the primary source of service revenue, payment may be made to a third party on behalf of the individual practitioner for benefits such as health insurance, skills training and other benefits customary for employees.” 42 C.F.R. § 447.10(g)(4). In issuing this regulation, CMS stated that deductions used to pay “costs customary for employees” fall within the scope of this addition. See 79 Fed. Reg. 2948-1, 3001 (Jan. 16, 2014). Union dues are never mentioned in the regulation, nor were they addressed specifically by CMS at any point in the rulemaking process.

82. In its notice of final rulemaking, CMS reiterated that the purpose of Section (a)(32) “was to prohibit factoring arrangements, and not to preclude a Medicaid program that is functioning as the practitioner’s primary source of revenue from fulfilling the basic responsibilities that are associated with that role.” 79 Fed. Reg. 2948-01, 2949 (Jan. 16, 2014); 77 Fed. Reg. 26362, 26381 (May 3, 2012) (proposing rule and noting that purpose of Section (a)(32) was to prohibit factoring). According to CMS, direct payments of customary employee benefits, remitted to third parties on behalf of the Medicaid practitioner for a stated purpose, was “not contemplated” under the Medicaid Act. 79 Fed. Reg. at 2949.

83. The homecare workers described in paragraphs 42-80 are a class of Medicaid practitioners whose primary source of service revenue is the Medicaid program.

II. DEFENDANTS’ 2019 ILLEGAL RULE CHANGE

84. On July 12, 2018, Defendants proposed a new rule, “Reassignment of Medicaid Provider Claims,” 83 Fed. Reg. 32252, rescinding subsection 447.10(g)(4). The proposed rule provided a thirty-day public comment period, rather than the more typical sixty-day period for public comment. Notwithstanding the absence of any mention of unions or union dues in the 2014 regulation or the statute, Defendants suggested that the impact of the proposed rule would

1 be to prohibit states from “reassigning homecare workers’ dues to unions.” 83 Fed. Reg. at 2 32254.

3 85. Shortly after release of this proposed rule, Plaintiffs wrote to Defendants 4 expressing deep concern about the proposed rule. They explained that a sixty-day comment 5 period was needed “in order to allow affected parties to weigh in and provide information to HHS 6 on the many aspects where the agency says it lacks information.” Defendants effectively denied 7 these requests. In the following weeks, thousands of interested parties submitted comments 8 opposing the proposed rule.

9 86. On May 6, 2019, Defendants published the final Rule. “Medicaid Program; 10 Reassignment of Medicaid Provider Claims,” RIN 0938-AT61. 84 Fed. Reg. 19718.

11 87. The Rule itself does nothing more than rescind subsection 447.10(g)(4). The 12 preamble makes clear, however, that Defendants have fashioned a novel interpretation of 13 Section (a)(32) in order to try to prohibit states from making ordinary payroll deductions or 14 contributions on behalf of Medicaid providers, including those who provide homecare.

15 88. The Rule offers no coherent explanation why Section (a)(32)’s rule that payments 16 “for any care or service provided to an individual shall [not] be made to anyone other than such 17 individual or the person or institution providing such care or service, under an assignment or 18 power of attorney or otherwise” should suddenly be interpreted to apply to ordinary, voluntary 19 payroll deductions and contributions.

20 89. Defendants concede, as they must, that Congress’ purpose in enacting 21 Section (a)(32) was to prohibit factoring and similar fraudulent practice, yet suggest, without 22 citation to the legislative history or other relevant evidence, that “we do not believe that this was 23 necessarily Congress’ only concern.” 84 Fed. Reg. at 19723. They offer no evidence that 24 Congress was concerned about state payments of ordinary payroll deductions, or that such 25 payments are in anyway similar to factoring or other practices with a potential for abuse.

26 90. The Rule relies on the phrase “or otherwise” to suggest that Congress intended the 27 statute to be broadly applied to “situations that did not involve factoring.” Id. Because that 28 phrase comes after more specific words (“under an assignment or power of attorney”), however,

1 established canons of statutory interpretation dictate that the more general “or otherwise” should 2 be construed to embrace concepts similar to those described in the more specific preceding list.

3 91. At the time when Congress amended Section (a)(32) in 1977, the statutory 4 authorities for consumer-directed Medicaid home and community-based services had not yet been 5 enacted.

6 92. Instead of explaining why Congress would have decided to shoehorn a ban on 7 states making ordinary payroll deductions and contributions into an anti-fraud statute using a 8 phrase like “or otherwise,” or making clear why this legal interpretation was recognized only 9 many decades later, Defendants focus on Section (a)(32)’s enumerated exceptions (e.g., 10 permitting Medicaid providers to assign payments to a governmental agency or to appoint an 11 agent for billing purposes), arguing that the fact that these exceptions speak to certain employer-12 employee relationships, but not to ordinary payroll deductions, is evidence that Congress intended 13 to disallow such deductions. This focus is a red herring, because exceptions are irrelevant if 14 Section (a)(32) does not apply in the first place.

15 93. Even so, the Rule’s analysis of Section (a)(32)’s exceptions is deeply flawed. On 16 the one hand, Defendants seek to strictly limit interpretation of Section (a)(32)’s exceptions to 17 those expressly stated by Congress, in order to claim that Congress has spoken “to ‘the precise 18 question at issue’” and prohibited state withholding of ordinary payroll deductions. 84 Fed. Reg.
19 at 19719 (quoting Chevron, U.S.A., Inc., v. National Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S.
20 837, 842-43 (1984)). Yet Defendants conclude, again with no explicit textual support or other 21 evidence, that “[b]ecause Congress recognized the employer-employee relationship in its list of 22 exceptions,” they will not interpret Section (a)(32) to prohibit “employee payroll deductions that 23 are made by a bona fide employer.” Id. at 19720. The Rule does not explain or define the term 24 “bona fide employer.” And Defendant simply ignore the existence of other non-enumerated 25 exceptions to Section (a)(32) that similarly would seem to fall outside the anti-reassignment 26 statute. See id. (concluding, without analysis, that CMS’ prior recognition of an implied 27 exception for payments to health maintenance organizations is “outside the scope of this 28 rulemaking”).

1 94. A much more plausible—indeed, the only plausible—interpretation of 2 Section (a)(32) is that ordinary payroll deductions “were not contemplated” under the Medicaid 3 Act’s anti-reassignment statute, as HHS concluded in 2014. 79 Fed. Reg. 2948-01, 2949 (Jan. 16, 4 2014).

5 95. Defendants do not explain what, exactly, motivated the rule change, apart from 6 unnamed stakeholders and the agency “engaging in a review of the statutory support.” 84 Fed.
7 Reg. at 19719. Some of the materials cited in the Rule may provide insight into Defendants’ 8 motives. For example, the so-called “Dues Skimming FAQ,” id. at 19726, n.2, urges HHS 9 “through administrative action” to “stop the deduction of dues from Medicaid” payments, 10 indicating that the Rule may be motivated by false characterizations of union dues deductions as 11 fraudulent “skimming” of Medicaid funds.

12 96. The Rule disclaims any serious attempt at fact-finding or weighing of the 13 advantages or disadvantages for Medicaid beneficiaries or other stakeholders. Instead, the “new 14 policy rests upon [...] solely a new legal analysis.” Id. at 19720.

15 97. Nevertheless, the Rule throughout displays a lack of understanding of the 16 programs it purports to regulate as well as the agency’s responsibilities under the Administrative 17 Procedure Act to engage in reasoned decision-making.

18 98. The Rule displays a lack of understanding of the complicated and varied joint or 19 shared relationships that exist between states or counties, Medicaid beneficiaries, and workers in 20 the context of consumer-directed Medicaid homecare programs, despite many commenters’ focus 21 on those programs in their objections to the Rule. For example, the Rule asserts that “home 22 health workers [...] are not employees of the state. As non-employees, such practitioners do not 23 receive salaries and wages from the state.” Id. at 19721 (emphasis omitted). This summary fails 24 to grasp complex, carefully crafted relationships in which workers are the employee of an 25 individual Medicaid beneficiary; sometimes, for specified purposes, jointly employed by the 26 Medicaid recipient and the state or a local governmental entity; and paid wages by States or their 27 fiscal intermediaries. (The exact specifics vary by jurisdiction and are described in paragraphs 28 42-80 above.) The Rule’s suggestion that subsection 447.10(g)(4) “was specifically applicable to

1 Medicaid enrolled individual practitioners who provided services on a contractual basis,” id. at 2 19723, is similarly off base.

3 99. To the extent that the Rule contemplates that Medicaid beneficiaries with 4 disabilities who are the employers of Medicaid homecare workers are just like any other 5 “employers” who “may withhold taxes and other voluntary deductions for benefits like health 6 insurance through the payroll process” to remain outside the scope of Section (a)(32), see, e.g., id.
7 at 19720, Defendants likewise show a lack of understanding of Plaintiffs’ programs and their 8 participants. Medicaid beneficiaries who receive homecare in the Medicaid programs at issue are 9 allowed to direct their own care, but they have been relieved of responsibility for processing 10 payroll and/or establishing many of the terms and conditions of employment, including 11 negotiating wages.¹ And for good reason—managing payroll, withholding taxes and voluntary 12 deductions, and negotiating wages would require Medicaid recipients to shoulder additional 13 burdens that would be onerous and unreasonable for most.

14 100. The Rule suggests that an individual provider who is harmed by an inability to pay 15 for items like health insurance through payroll deductions can “seek employment with home 16 health agencies or other employers that offer benefit packages.” Id. at 19722. This ignores the 17 strong public policy reasons that federal and state governments have for creating consumer-18 directed programs as an alternative to agency-based health care.

19 101. The preamble states that the Rule “will not impact a state’s ability to perform 20 Financial Management Services (FMS) or secure FMS through a vendor arrangement.” Id. at 21 19719. Yet the definition of FMS functions listed do not include either negotiating wages, 22 deducting voluntary employee deductions like health insurance or union dues, or making 23 contributions to benefit trusts on behalf of the providers. Id.; see also id. at 19724 (stating that 24 state agencies are “not permitted to ‘pass through’ Medicaid reimbursement for healthcare 25 services to third parties not recognized under the Medicaid statute”). Many of Plaintiffs’ 26 programs provide payroll support for Medicaid beneficiary-employers yet do not otherwise fit the 27 ¹ There are some Medicaid homecare programs that do give beneficiaries this type of budgetary 28 authority, but they are relatively small and are not the subject of Plaintiffs’ comments or complaint.

1 FMS description. The Rule makes no effort to apply its reasoning to any of the actual state 2 programs that were described in public comments.

3 102. The Rule dismisses any reliance interests as “not serious.” Id. at 19720. In doing 4 so, the Rule ignores substantial evidence of serious reliance interests articulated by numerous 5 States and stakeholders, including by representatives of some of the hundreds of thousands of 6 Medicaid homecare beneficiaries. See, e.g., Aug. 13, 2019 Letter from Justice in Aging, 7 Disability Rights Education & Defense Fund, and Disability Rights California (noting that the 8 proposed rule “harms consumers and providers without offering any countervailing benefits”).

9 103. Defendants incorrectly attribute Plaintiffs’ reliance interests to subsection 10 447.10(g)(4), promulgated in 2014. But Plaintiffs’ reliance interests stretch back at least to the 11 early 1990s, when California started authorizing direct deduction of union dues and other 12 voluntary benefits, and thus cannot be pegged to the 2014 regulations. Prior to 2014, CMS for 13 years approved state plans, conducted audits and reviews, conducted discussions with states and 14 stakeholders, and approved invoices and payments that reflected state-level deductions for union 15 dues (and other items).

16 104. At various points in the Rule, Defendants claim that they cannot make factual 17 findings or provide an impact analysis of the Rule because the thousands of comments received 18 during rulemaking lacked “substantive analysis” or “documentation.” 84 Fed. Reg. at 19724-26.
19 Yet it was Defendants who failed to reach out to states for more information prior or after to 20 promulgating the proposed rule, and who ignored Plaintiffs’ requests to extend the comment 21 period. Moreover, Defendants largely ignore the substantial comments that they did receive, 22 relying instead on a few newspaper articles and websites for basic information about the scope of 23 the Medicaid programs that they administer.

24 105. Most egregiously, Defendants complain that commentators failed to “explain how 25 or why [...] alleged harms would occur,” id. at 19721, and come to the conclusory finding that 26 elimination of payroll deductions “in no way prevents health care workers from purchasing health 27 insurance, enrolling in trainings, or paying dues to a union,” id., and thus there is no reason to be 28 concerned about the impact of the Rule on access to or quality of care. Id. at 19724. Yet as

1 Plaintiffs’ and other stakeholders’ comments laid out in detail, there is as a direct relationship 2 between maintaining adequate wages and benefits and the ability to attract and retain a qualified 3 workforce. See, e.g., Aug. 9, 2018 Letter from U.C. Berkeley Center for Labor Research and 4 Education (describing research regarding the benefits of strong unions in the context the home 5 and community services workforce and concluding that “making it more difficult for homecare 6 workers to voluntarily contribute to their union [...] could result in lower worker wages, higher 7 worker turnover, greater worker shortages, poorer quality of care, and an increase in the overall 8 cost of long-term care); Aug. 13, 2018 Letter from SEIU (explaining that ending members’ ability 9 to “conveniently and securely” contribute to a union “threatens both the progress made in 10 improving workforce standards as well as the ability of these workers to make further gains in the 11 future”); Aug. 13, 2018 Letter from the State of California (citing research showing that worker 12 organization “has led to increased retention and training among workers, helping to create a more 13 stable, efficient and high quality provider workforce”).

14 106. And Defendants disregarded comments from administrators of health and 15 retirement programs indicating that there is no adequate substitute for direct payroll deductions 16 and contributions, especially for this population of workers. Defendants’ conclusion that 17 individual Medicaid homecare providers “remain free to purchase health insurance” and other 18 benefits after receiving payment, 84 Fed. Reg. at 19721, thus fails to address an important aspect 19 of the problem. See, e.g., Aug. 13, 2018 Letter from Health Care Employees/Employer Dental & 20 Medical Trust (“[w]ithout the automatic deduction through payroll, many workers would find it 21 difficult to maintain the payments for coverage[.]”); Aug. 13, 2018 Letter from Healthy San 22 Francisco (noting that elimination of a payroll deduction option would cause health plan to incur 23 extra costs for mailing and billing as well as an increase in uninsured workers that would in turn 24 cause a “steep rise in administrative costs” to the plan).

25 107. The Rule also incorrectly concludes that the costs of payments for those with bank 26 accounts or debit cards are “negligible since deductions can be set up through financial 27 institutions and can often easily be set up online.” 84 Fed. Reg. at 19726. This ignores abundant 28 evidence in the record that bank account debits are not an adequate replacement for payroll deductions and contributions, especially for low-wage workers. Indeed, despite a multi-year effort, California has direct deposit only for approximately 40 percent of all providers. The suggestion that workers should simply buy stamps and envelopes to mail their contributions for voluntary health, retirement, and union dues on a monthly basis is unreasonable; no other type of worker is expected to go without the convenience and reliability of direct payroll debits.

108. Moreover, while the Rule appears to suggest that assignments would be permissible if “made to a governmental agency or entity,” 85 Fed. Reg. at 19720, and addresses permissible assignments for “withholding Federal, state, and local tax and making tax payments to appropriate tax authorities,” id. at 19719, there is no reference to similar assignments for workers’ compensation insurance coverage. The Rule, instead, creates ambiguity by stating that “whether a particular assignment is permitted [...] will depend on the particular facts of the arrangement.” Id. at 19720.

109. The Rule constitutes a final agency action for purposes of judicial review. 5 U.S.C. § 704.

III. THE FINAL RULE AND ITS IMPLEMENTATION BY DEFENDANTS HARM THE INTERESTS OF PLAINTIFF STATES AND THEIR RESIDENTS

A. The Final Rule Undermines Collective Bargaining Relationships and Harms State Medicaid Programs and Beneficiaries

110. The Secretary’s restriction on the withholding of union dues and other benefits from provider paychecks would harm the integrity of the States’ Medicaid programs and millions of state Medicaid beneficiaries and workers.

111. The States have each decided to authorize direct payroll deductions for the purpose of enabling workers’ payment of voluntary union dues. Direct payroll deductions are a reliable and well-established method for making these payments, especially for a diffuse workforce. Direct payroll deductions avoid the unnecessary hardships that may be caused by direct debits from the bank accounts of homecare workers who have such accounts, as well as the unnecessary administrative challenges involved in payment by check or cash.

112. Overall, automatic payroll deductions and trust contributions on behalf of workers have facilitated the emergence of stable collective bargaining relationships that have improved

1 the quality of the provider workforce and reduced provider turnover. The Final Rule, as 2 Defendants intend to implement it, would weaken those relationships and make it harder for the 3 States to maintain an adequate homecare workforce in an already challenging labor market.

4 113. The States have a strong interest in permitting union members' payment of their 5 voluntary dues through payroll deduction. Unreliable payments of union dues would reduce the 6 strength and stability of funding available for workforce representation, impairing unions' ability 7 to serve their members. Unions would likely have to reduce the technical advice and training 8 they provide to homecare workers, as well as curtail participation in stakeholder activities. The 9 States have sovereign interests in the public policy-making process, and that process is improved 10 when official representatives of the Medicaid personal care workforce have necessary resources 11 to participate in a range of stakeholder activities.

12 114. Implementation of the Final Rule and Defendants' new interpretation of the 13 Medicaid Act would disrupt a myriad of reliance interests embodied in existing collective 14 bargaining agreements, all of which assume the availability of direct deductions and contributions 15 as a way to pay for union dues and other voluntary, bargained-for benefits.

16 115. Defendants' implementation of the Final Rule will allow Medicaid providers who 17 work for homecare agencies—but not providers hired directly by Medicaid beneficiaries via the 18 Independent Provider mode to do identical work—to avail themselves of payroll deductions and 19 contributions for union dues and other voluntary, bargained-for benefits. This unfairly burdens 20 beneficiaries who prefer to hire providers directly.

21 116. Finally, any changes to the States' Medicaid personal care services program that 22 reduce the quality or stability of providers create real human costs for the beneficiaries of those 23 programs, as well as undermine their Olmstead rights to receive services in the most integrated 24 setting. Individuals who are aged, blind and disabled and need assistance to perform activities of 25 daily living are better served by consistent and well-trained caregivers.

26 117. Alternatively, if the States choose to forego federal matching funds for these 27 programs in order to avoid Defendants' Final Rule and new interpretation of the Medicaid Act, 28 that decision would cause other serious harms to the States. Because federal funds provide more

1 than half of all funding for Medicaid consumer-directed personal care services, loss of these 2 dollars would have devastating budgetary impacts on the States' ability to provide Medicaid 3 services to seniors and persons with disabilities. The Final Rule and Defendants' new 4 interpretation of the Medicaid Act would force States into a choice between limiting access to 5 these vital services, harming both Medicaid recipients and workers, or risk foregoing all of the 6 interests that the States have determined are furthered by their authorization of payroll deductions 7 for homecare worker dues and contributions for other benefits.

8 B. The Final Rule and Its Implementation by Defendants Impose Unnecessary
9 and Burdensome Costs Upon States

10 118. Implementation of the Final Rule in the manner Defendants have indicated would 11 unnecessarily increase the administrative burdens on and costs to State agencies and broader 12 health care delivery systems.

13 119. For example, many counties in California offer Medicaid homecare providers the 14 option to enroll in local healthcare coverage through community-based, not-for-profit health 15 plans. To the extent that the Final Rule purports to prohibit providers from electing to have their 16 premiums paid through their paycheck, health plans will have to establish a significant new 17 administrative structure to bill, account manage enrollment for thousands of individuals on a 18 monthly basis. And Washington has negotiated with SEIU 775 to contribute to a health benefits 19 trust which provides health care to eligible individual providers who choose to enroll and 20 authorize deduction of health care premiums. The Final Rule arbitrarily removes a convenience 21 that is enjoyed by the vast majority of Americans with employer-based health insurance.

22 120. By increasing the likelihood that providers in many instances could lose health 23 insurance due to failure to pay required monthly contributions, the Rule places the health 24 insurance of providers at risk and undermines the overall financial health and stability of such 25 benefit programs, and of providers themselves.

C. The Final Rule and Its Implementation by Defendants Impermissibly Intrude Upon State Sovereign Interests

121. As described above, the Medicaid Act provides no authority for Defendants to impose their new interpretation of the Medicaid Act to prohibit deductions and contributions of voluntary union dues and other benefits.

122. In addition to harms to the States' personal care services programs, beneficiaries and workers, the Final Rule interferes with the States' exercise of their inherent, traditional police powers, including their ability to regulate employment relationships.

123. When Congress enacted Section (a)(32) of the Medicaid Act, it did not intend to interfere with state labor laws, let alone make its intent to do so "unmistakably clear in the language of the statute." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 460 (1991) (quoting Atascadero State Hospital v. Scanlon, 473 U.S. 234, 242 (1985)).

124. Defendants' change in interpretation of the Medicaid Act further interferes with the States' authority to enact and enforce laws that promote the health and safety of their residents, especially the States' most vulnerable residents. If States do not accept such conditions for their federal Medicaid programs, or if Defendants withhold funding from States on the basis of these requirements, the States could collectively lose $6 billion in critical funds that would otherwise go to healthcare services for State residents.

125. Defendants' new interpretation and enforcement of Section (a)(32) will require the States to change their state laws and policies in order to comply. 84 Fed. Reg. at 19723 ("if state law(s) and/or regulation(s) conflict [...] the state Medicaid agency will need to take corrective action to comply"). This would involve unnecessary changes to an approach to service delivery that States have found to be an effective tool to deliver needed services to seniors and persons with disabilities through a stable, trained workforce. It would also compromise States' and localities' abilities to adhere to collective bargaining agreements that provide for direct debits and contributions on behalf of individual providers of union dues and other negotiated benefits.

126. The States should not be faced with the Hobson's choice of agreeing to an unlawful new requirement for their Medicaid home and community-based services programs, or

1 foregoing Medicaid funds and losing critical public healthcare dollars that could result in the 2 elimination of these optional services from the States' Medicaid programs, all to the detriment of 3 the States' residents.

4 FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION

5 (Violation of APA; 5 U.S.C. § 706—Not in Accordance With Law)

6 127. Paragraphs 1 through 126 are realleged and incorporated herein by reference.

7 128. Defendants' interpretation of the Medicaid Act, on which the Final Rule is 8 premised, is not in accordance with law. Section (a)(32) of the Medicaid Act does not prohibit 9 the voluntary deduction of union dues from personal care services provider paychecks. These 10 type of deductions clearly do not involve payments "under an assignment or power of attorney or 11 otherwise"; automatic deductions and contributions are simply a convenient means for paying 12 voluntary union dues and other customary benefits such as health, dental, and vision insurance.

13 129. Because Defendants' new Rule is not in accordance with the Medicaid Act, the 14 Rule is invalid.

15 SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION

16 (Violation of APA; 5 U.S.C. § 706-Arbitrary and Capricious)

17 130. Paragraphs 1 through 129 are realleged and incorporated herein by reference.

18 131. By promulgating this new Rule, Defendants have acted arbitrarily and capriciously 19 and abused their discretion. Defendants have relied on factors that Congress did not intend them 20 to consider, failed to consider important aspects of the program the agency is addressing, and 21 have offered no explanation for the new Rule that is consistent with the evidence before the 22 agency. See Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass'n of the U.S. v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co., 463 U.S. 29, 23 43 (1983).

24 132. Moreover, CMS failed to consider serious reliance interests engendered by 25 decades of practice permissible under the governing statute, without any sufficient explanation for 26 its novel interpretation of a 1970s-era prohibition on assignment of provider claims. See Encino 27 Motorcars, LLC v. Navarro, 136 S. Ct. 2117, 2126 (2016) (declining to defer to agency provided insufficiently reasoned explanation for “why it deemed it necessary to overrule its previous position”).
 28

133. Because Defendants’ new Rule is arbitrary, capricious, and an abuse of discretion, the Rule is invalid.

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION

(Violation of APA; 5 U.S.C. § 706-Exceeds Statutory Authority)

134. Paragraphs 1 through 133 are realleged and incorporated herein by reference.

135. Article I, Section I of the United States Constitution enumerates that “[a]ll legislative Powers herein granted shall be vested in [the] Congress.”

136. Defendants’ Rule is unconstitutional because Defendants overstepped their powers by exercising lawmaking authority that is solely reserved for Congress under Article I, Section I of the U.S. Constitution.

137. Article I, Section VIII of the United States Constitution vests exclusively in Congress the spending power to “provide for ... the General Welfare of the United States.”

138. Defendants have exceeded congressional authority by purporting to add substantive new requirements to state Medicaid programs that are not authorized by the Medicaid Act or any other federal law. The Rule therefore unlawfully exceeds the Executive Branch’s powers and intrudes upon the powers of Congress.

139. For the reasons herein, the Rule is unlawful, unconstitutional, and should be set aside under 28 U.S.C. § 2201.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, the States respectfully request that this Court:

1. Issue a declaratory judgment that the Rule, including Defendants’ new interpretation of Section (a)(32), is arbitrary and capricious, not in accordance with law, and Defendants acted in excess of statutory authority in promulgating it;

1 2. Issue a declaratory judgment that the Rule, including Defendants' new interpretation of 2 Section (a)(32), is unconstitutional and invalid;

3 3. Issue an injunction prohibiting the implementation of the Rule, including Defendants' 4 enforcement of its new interpretation of Section (a)(32);

5 4. Postpone the effective date and/or set aside the Rule, including Defendants' new 6 interpretation of Section (a)(32), pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 705, 706(2);

7 4. Award the States' costs, expenses, and reasonable attorneys' fees pursuant to 28 U.S.C.
8 § 2412; and,

9 5. Award such other relief as the Court deems just and proper.
